If you need another mountain thread later, I still have a few from the lower trail.

19:24 · #2

The weather turned again an hour later, so I am glad I stopped when I did.

18:48 · #4

All right. I will leave the originals where they are.

18:12 · #6

I can add a short note about where they were taken if that helps.

17:36 · #8

Let us keep these two. They fit nicely.

19:42 · #1

Same. Those two photos already tell the story.

19:06 · #3

Thanks.

18:30 · #5

No need. The images do enough on their own.

17:54 · #7

Yes, that is exactly the idea.

17:18 · #9

Do you want both in the same conversation for the demo?

17:00 · #10

Nice. The second image feels more personal.

16:42 · #11

Sending the closer photo too.

16:24 · #12

Received. That one is beautiful.

16:06 · #13

I am sending the wide one now.

15:48 · #14

The air looked blue in person, but the files are warmer than I expected.

15:12 · #16

I kept people out of frame so it stays calm.

14:36 · #18

The second one is more about the trees and the slope below them.

14:00 · #20

The first photo has the peaks layered in the background.

13:24 · #22

That will make the thread feel seasonal without looking harsh.

13:06 · #23

There is still some snow in the shade, but the path itself is clear.

12:48 · #24

Perfect. Two photos are enough.

12:30 · #25

Yes. One wide shot from the trail bend and another closer one near the timberline.

12:12 · #26

Did you get a couple of stills?

11:54 · #27

It did. I stopped twice on the way down because the light kept changing.

11:36 · #28

That must have looked amazing.

11:18 · #29

The ridge finally cleared after lunch and the whole valley opened up.

11:00 · #30

That is fine. Warm is easier to work with.

15:30 · #15

Good thinking.

14:54 · #17

That sounds like a good contrast.

14:18 · #19

Nice.

13:42 · #21
